THE DEPARTMENT SYSTEM

By L. M. HEWIT.

A thoroughly organized business system calls for one general head and a well equipped department to conduct the several divisions of the organization. The most important branch of the organization of the city of Bryan, as now constituted, is its public works, which covers the streets, light, water and sewer systems, and the public buildings. The city's investment in this department is upwards of two hundred thousand dollars. This of course does not include the public schools, as they are properly under the control of the educational department. The light, water and sewer systems carry an investment of about $75,000 with a present revenue of about $45,000 annually to be received and disbursed.

This immense public business can only become a permanent benefit to the citizens by the careful management of an expert in the line of public utilities. Might as well expect a great mercantile establishment to produce a profit to the owners without a well regulated business system as to expect any permanent economical benefits from the public utilities of the city of Bryan without a well regulated business system conducted by a competent director. The water and light systems of Bryan conducted upon business principles can produce a very handsome income to the public works department, or if it is allowed to shift for itself, it can become a burden to the taxpayers. It is up to the voters to decide.

The transportation of the city is equally important, as safety to life and property depends upon the condition of the streets. Properly managed, the streets of Bryan should be in reasonably good condition ten months of the year. An expert white road builder could afford to keep the grader going during all good weather, putting on two good mule teams and a driver, operating the grader himself, at an annual cost of $1750. This would keep all drainage in good condition and streets above the average for cities of Bryan's class.

Department of Public Safety.

The police and fire departments are two most important adjuncts to a well organized civic community and should be under the complete control of the legislative body or board of commissioners, as it is intended that Bryan shall be. These departments, in order to become the effective, dependable organizations that any city of the magnitude of Bryan needs in order to produce the greatest degree of safety to life and property, must be controlled from and by one source, and in order that this may be so that source must have the appointing power, and such appointment should be for an indefinite period, which should really mean life or efficient service. This should apply in a volunteer department just as much as in a fully paid department.

Health Department.

The health department, which secures the safety to life and property through the sanitary system, should be a thoroughly organized system under the direction of the health officer, with power to promulgate and enforce well defined sanitary measures at all times. Great epidemics have followed seasons of indifference on the part of the public and laxity on the part of health officers. It is more economical to be watchful 365 days than to suffer disaster a single day.

Department of Education.

This department will be passed with only a single observation. Its great success in Bryan is an argument in favor of our whole contention—a well organized advisory board, with power to appoint and delegate its power to an expert at the head. Bryan schools are a credit to any city because they have an expert manager.

Department of Recreation.

The department of recreation in Bryan should be under the control of a board of managers consisting of seven members, and these should be nominated by the Civic League and appointed by the board of commissioners. The department should receive a reasonable appropriation from the general funds, and should have power to secure resources from other sources for the purpose of providing suitable parks and playgrounds for the city. A most important function of a city is to provide its citizens with recreation. Sane recreation is one great bulwark to our civilization.

WHAT NOW INTERFERES?

The season for the straw hat is waning. This morning early there was the merest faint flush of fall in the fields. Maybe, after all, we will pull through one of the longest, most trying summers that the weather man ever laid hand to. Just one good rain now, and there would be joy in every household.—Lufkin News.

You have had your rain since you wrote the wish for it. Now are you joyful, as promised? Are you as contented as you thought you would be, or is there something else that now oppresses you instead of the hot weather and drought? We know your answer—there are other things that come between you and contentment. Yet a little while, you tell yourself, and all will be well. Always, always yet a little while!—Galveston News.

Contentment is always just a little further up the creek. "Still achieving, still pursuing, learn to labor and to wait," is the true philosophy of life.

This time next year we are expecting to be able to drive over some of the newly made pikes to be put down in this portion of Grimes county. The condition of the roads at this time should be all that is necessary to make converts to the good roads movement.—Navasota Examiner.

The condition of the roads of Brazos county are bright and shining object lessons, but we do not know about how many converts to the matter of good roads they are making. At any rate, the prospects for pikes in these diggings are slim at the present writing.

The proposition to electrify the Bryan-College interurban railroad is now the most important measure before the people of this community. Rapid transit between Bryan and the A. & M. College is an absolute necessity for both places, and the better the service the greater the benefits to each. With the line electrified, complete confidence will be restored in the entire proposition, and a service can be instituted and maintained that will be of untold benefit to both places.

Train robber Edwards, who robbed the passengers on a train near New Orleans on September 4, and who has been in a hospital since from injuries inflicted by the engineer, now says he was hypnotized by four strangers to commit the deed. We do not know to what extent he was hypnotized, but we do know that when the engineer got through with him he was good and properly paralyzed.

Now comes an opinion from the attorney general's office to the effect that a person practicing law ought to have a license. It is imagined also that he ought to know some law.—Galveston News.

Some men practice law from necessity, and it is a true saying and worthy of all acceptance that "necessity knows no law."

The Houston Chronicle asks, "Can a very broad-minded woman wear a narrow skirt?" What has a woman's mind to do with the size of her skirt? From where the mind is supposed to be located to where the skirt is worn is "far, far away."

The spirit displayed in Mr. McCullough's article accepting the result in the contested election case will meet the hearty commendation of every good citizen of Brazos county.

The street sprinkler was going today and its effect was like pouring oil on troubled waters, or the balm of Gilead on the bruised and broken spirit.

A stranger in Chicago was held up and robbed by women. After it was all over, he said he thought the "coy damsels with revolvers were trying to flirt with him."

Let's make the reception and banquet for the teachers Friday night an occasion that will long live in the social annals of Bryan.

With each going down of the sun, the blessed democrats, like the saints of the old hymn, are one day nearer home.
